

Asian Light Olefins

For more than three decades CMAI has provided our clients with expanding coverage of the global light olefins industry, starting with the Houston-based Monomers Market Advisory Service – North American Light Olefins in September 1980 and followed by the London-based Europe/ Middle East Olefins & Derivatives Market Advisory Service in October 1986. Over time, as these traditional markets have grown, we have expanded our analysis and the staff of professionals that enable CMAI to bring our clients the experience and expertise required to continue providing the highest quality in olefins consulting services. The global markets for ethylene and propylene continue to evolve and transform in the current decade, with greater emphasis on investments in the Middle East and Asia. The Asian Light Olefins Market Advisory Service provides focused coverage on the Asia region, rounding out a truly global light olefins consulting practice.

CMAI provides analysis and forecasting, focused in the fastest growing region for light olefins, Northeast and Southeast Asia, as part of the Asian Light Olefins Market Advisory Service. Representing the fastest growing segment of the global Olefins industry, this service is based out of our Singapore office by consultants that have many years of experience in this region.

True to the region, the service provides a balance of weekly updates on pricing, costs and market events as well as a monthly analysis that includes a special focus on a timely topic in the olefins industry and forecasts for future pricing, costs, maintenance outages, new capacity, supply, demand, and trade. Pricing and economics are also available via CMAI's web-based pricing database.

CMAI's Asian Light Olefins Market Advisory Service provides short term analysis and forecast with a primary focus in the Asia region. Weekly reports provide current market analysis and monthly reports provide an outlook for future costs, prices, supply, demand and trade.
